

Making College & Career Count

Speaker Introduction

Good morning/afternoon. We are pleased today to be hosting Making College and Career Count.

This presentation will share unique perspective on how to make the most of your next step after high school. It will share how to get the job done when you head off to college as well as give insight on how to interview and succeed in your first job out of high school.

The program and book have been featured on CBS, MS-NBC and CNN, and in Newsweek, the New York Times and USA Today.

The event is brought to us at no cost because of contributions from some organizations like:

- Army ROTC
- My College Options
- The National Guard
- Bank of America, and
- American Petroleum Institute, which represents America's Oil and Natural Gas Industries

These organizations allow the program to be provided at no cost to our school.

Our speaker today is John Girton. He is a motivational speaker, author, and Journalism and Telecommunications instructor at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana. He also owns his own a communications-consulting and training firm in Indianapolis, Indiana. John travels extensively speaking and training non-profit and non-governmental business leaders on marketing, communication strategies and image building. He enjoys sharing messages of hope and inspiration to audiences of all ages.

So, Put your hands together for

John Girton, Jr.